Questions of integrity asked

SPORT New Zealand is seeking public opinion in a review of sport integrity.

The organisation is calling on anyone involved in sport to share their thoughts on a range of integrity issues through an online survey that will be open for the next six weeks.

"There's no question New Zealanders love sport, but we also know that the integrity of sport is increasingly threatened at grassroots and elite levels by issues such as sideline behaviour, failure to protect children, match-fixing, corruption and doping," Sport NZ chief executive Peter Miskimmin said.

Sport Bay of Plenty community sport manager Nick Chambers told the OPOTIKI NEWS last week there were not any consistent poor sideline behavioural issues in the Eastern Bay.

"About two years ago we started an open consultation process with regional sporting organisations, local clubs, coaches and officials to look at how we can all promote positive sideline behaviour and ensure everyone involved in sport is having a great experience.

"This included submissions from Eastern Bay.

"The result was the Lead the Cheer campaign. The aim is to empower local sporting organisations and clubs with the knowledge and resources to help tackle any negative issues before they become a problem.

"The key message of Lead the Cheer is that sport should be fun.

"We can all play a role in building that culture by making sure kids have a great time and enjoy being active."

Chambers said Sport Bay of Plenty had a child protection policy in place which covered police vetting of employees, staff responsibilities and processes for reporting concerns.

"A 2017 Sport New Zealand survey showed 84 per cent of participants felt they learnt essential life skills such as teamwork, communication and co-operation by playing sport. We also know that participation in sport creates healthier, happier people who are better connected to their communities."

The online survey and a Sport NZ discussion document are available at sportnz.org.nz.

HANCOCK FOREST MANAGEMENT WILL SOON BE UNDERTAKING HARVESTING OF THE PINE PLANTATION AT TUNAPAHORE B2A INCORPORATED FARM, 2558B STATE HIGHWAY 35, HAWAI

As many coast residents will be aware, there are important cultural sites within the block including large pa and mara kai sites that are visible from the highway. Hancock Forest Management and the owners of Tunapahore B2A are working with Heritage New Zealand Pouhere Taonga to ensure that none of these special places are damaged or affected by the harvesting activity. Heritage New Zealand have granted an archaeological authority in order to permit the harvesting work to be done, and have imposed conditions on the work process.

During the week, commencing 19th November 2018 a team of archaeologists from InSitu Heritage Ltd and the University of Otago will be monitoring earthworks that Hancock Forest Management will be carrying out in preparation for harvesting. This will involve ground disturbance in the pasture areas adjacent to the pine plantation. As this work will be carried out close to the cultural and archaeological sites; there is a reasonable likelihood that buried evidence of gardening and living sites will be uncovered. The archaeological team will be on hand to record and investigate any features that are exposed during the earthworks. The result of the archaeological investigation will be fully reported to the landowners and Heritage New Zealand.

The consent granted by Heritage New Zealand also requires that Hancock Forest Management have appropriate tikanga and cultural monitoring in place. This is being arranged with the assistance of the Committee of Management of Tunapahore B2A.

If you have any questions about the proposed work, please contact Reuben Hawtree, Hancock Forest Management Environmental Forester on 027 615 7935 or email rhawtree@hnrng.com
